GOAL OF THE GAME:

The goal of the game is to kill your enemy's monarch, once that happens, the game is over, and one of the two players is victorious.
While seemingly straightforward, the rules make reaching this objective a bit more complicated.

INTRODUCING THE CHARACTERS:

WORKER:

In our mythical society, it is mostly trolls that carry out manual labor. Their simple-mindedness makes them inept on the battlefield or in the classroom, but their brute strength and endurance makes them excellent miners and workmen. They are impossible to kill due to their thick skin which cannot be penetrated by neither swords nor arrows, and they are so beloved that not even their enemies would want to, anyway.
Offering employment to a troll requires pressing the key "C" (for player 1) or the key "B" (for player 2) on your keyboard, and it has a cost of £2. Once they are in your service, they will wait near the barracks until you dispatch them to their posts. Since they are sociable creatures, if you employ more than one troll, they will all work on the same post. In order to send them to work in the mines, you need to press "Q" (for player 1) and "P" for player 2. Once they reach the mines, they will go inside and you will not be able to see them anymore, but do not fret! They are still there, just out of sight. They will then start mining and bartering coal, thus you will notice your resources increase. Obviously, the more trolls you employ, the more resources they will generate.
Trolls are also very good at repairing, thus if your wall or your tower have withstood damage from the attacks, you may send them to fix it. Pressing "W" (for player 1) or "O" (for player 2) will dispatch the trolls to repair the tower, whereas by pressing "E" (for player 1) or "I" (for player 2) you will send them to the wall. But remember: if the buildings have no damage (their HP is at max), they will have nothing to fix! And if they become damaged after you've already assigned them to repair, you will need to give the order once more. However, despite their dullness, if you assign them to repair a building that is no longer standing, they will not listen (they cannot fully rebuild something that was destroyed).

KNIGHT:

The knights are certainly the most bloodthirsty amongst our characters. They only fight with a sword and therefore need to be up close to their enemies, but they relish the danger and welcome the honor of giving their lives for their kingdom. They are the only ones with the ability to kill the monarchs, therefore you need at least one knight in order to win the game. You may offer employment to a knight by pressing the key "X" (for player 1) or "N" (for player 2) and they request £5 for their service. Their swords cannot penetrate the thick rock of the wall, nor do they have the ability to climb it, therefore they only really become useful after the archer takes out the enemy's wall or if the enemy has units dispatched outside of the kingdom's perimeter. If the enemy they were attacking walks away mid-attack, you will need to provide them with new orders; however, if they manage their task of killing the enemy, they will automatically return to the barracks. They wait in the barracks until dispatched. Knights may attack other knights, archers or monarchs. In order to attack members of the army press “1” (for player 1) or “0” (for player 2), whereas to attack monarchs you can press “2” (for player 1) or “9” (for player 2). You can send them back to the barracks by pressing “S” (for player 1) or “K” (for player 2).

ARCHER:

While the knights are tasked with bringing victory home, it is the job of the archers to do the heavy lifting as to allow their fellow knights the possibility to kill the enemy’s monarch. They have a range of 400 pixels and can attack buildings, other archers or knights. Employing an archer has a cost of £5 and you may do so by pressing “Z” (for player 1) or “M” (for player 2). They wait in the barracks until you send them out. By pressing “D” (for player 1) or “J” (for player 2), you can send them to attack the enemy’s wall (if it is still standing) or the enemy’s tower (if the wall has been destroyed), once their target is destroyed (whether it be wall or tower), they automatically return to the barracks to await further orders. You may also order them to retreat to the barracks by pressing “A” (for player 1) or “L” (for player 2). If you want them to attack the enemy’s archers or knights, all you need to do is press “F” (for player 1) or “H” (for player 2) and they will find the nearest enemy and attack. Remember: they can only attack enemy army members if the enemy wall is down or if the army is beyond their kingdom’s perimeter!

MONARCH

The monarch spends the entire game hidden away in the tower, perhaps cowering, perhaps giving orders to their generals. They only emerge once their tower is destroyed and that is your chance to go after them and claim victory. The king (player one) moves back and forth using “left control” and “left option” respectively, whereas the queen (player 2) uses “left” and “right”. Once they are out in the open, all they can do is escape (within the bounds of the screen) in order to avoid being killed.

TOWER ARROWS

While not necessarily a “character”, they deserve their own section since they are certainly something to fear. The tower, indeed, has the ability to shoot arrows within a certain range, which especially endangers the archers dispatched to attack the wall or the tower. However, since these arrows are massive and take time to load in the cannon, they have a pretty long cooldown period. You may shoot them by pressing “SPACE” (for player 1) or “RETURN” (for player 2).

RECAP

C/B	spawn worker
X/N	spawn knight
Z/M	spawn archer
A/L	archer retreat to barracks
D/J	archer attack wall/tower
F/H	archer attack army
Q/P	worker go to mine
W/O	worker repair tower
E/I	worker repair wall
1/0	knight attack army
2/9	knight attack monarch
S/K	knight retreat to barracks
LEFT CTRL/LEFT	monarch move left
LEFT OPTION/RIGHT	monarch move right
SPACE/RETURN	tower shoot arrow